

One of the most important keys to relationships is communication. It helps you connect with people and know the other person. One of the most important ways you will be able to go forward in life is through good communication. Communication helps you form as well as repair issues in a relationship. One needs to know about how to communicate well and properly. The more you communicate with people, the higher will be your skills of communication. Communication is the⁸⁰ most important thing that we need to establish in all of our relationships. For example, if you want a pizza, you must express that you want a pizza. Communication means that people will not know what you think unless you tell them. Communication is the key to sharing a good relationship with your family members. Family members share their happiness, sorrow and stories through communication. Communication is the most important factor that helps you share a good relationship with your¹⁶⁰ family. Without communication, you would not know many things about the members of family. When you neglect to share good communication skills with your family, you will be awkward around them. You and your family will not know each other. When you have good communication skills, you will be able to easily make friends. Good communication skills help you know that what kind of conversation will help you to start a conversation with someone strange. Communication helps you learn new²⁴⁰ things about someone when you talk to them. An important part of communication is listening. A good communicator is always a good listener. At home, we have so many fights with our siblings and family because either we did not tell them what we want or used the wrong means to do so. With our friends, we may sometimes get into huge fights because we are most often too nervous about explaining the circumstances. Lack of communication is the worst³²⁰ way to destroy a relationship. This can lead to horrible situation. What happens with most of our relationships is that we are often faced with conflict in our relationships. This conflict arises from not being able to communicate with one another. It is a common saying that communication is a key for any relationship, but on the face of it, it is confusing to think about its meaning. Problems arise in relationships because we often forget that none of us⁴⁰⁰ can read the mind and we cannot simply predict or figure out about what a person is thinking. To take another example, if you want to borrow a novel from someone, but have not told them and they give it to someone else before you tell them, it will be your mistake for not having communicated with them about the same earlier. Communication and human life go hand in hand because human life and social life go hand in hand.⁴⁸⁰